TO REMEMBER THE MAINE

Tuesday Is Twelfth Anniversary of Sinking of Ship-Memorial Service.

Sad but impressive were the memorial services held Sunday night in the First Baptist church in memory of the gallant soldiers who lost their lives during the Spanish-American war and who have died since that time. Before an audience which taxed the capacity of the church, among whom were num-bered civil war veterans, union and confederate, Rev. Dr. Robert Bruce Smith reviewed patriotically the events which led up to the terrible disaster of the sinking of the Maine and the war that followed.

He compared the great leaders of modern times to those of biblical days; reviewed the distress of Cuba under despotic rule and declared that the American republic answered the call of God, when it responded in freeing a down-trodden people.

Appeal to Raise Ship.

During the program, H. L. Walker,
post commander of the Hamilton Fish department of Texas, read a strong appeal that patriotic organiza-tion, citizens and school children meet at their respective assemblies Tuesday and hold exercises appropriate in com-memoration of the 12th anniversary of the sinking of the Maine. In it was stated a protest toward the nation's neglect in such a way as will shake the halls of congress to its foundation, causing the representatives to take immediate action on the raising of the old ship and give the 63 bodies, buried the ruins, a resting place beside their shipmates in Arlington cemetery. The appeal has been sent broadcast by Emory Marshall, senior vice commander in chief of the national order, whose headquarters are in Chicago. states in plain terms that the neglect in this matter has become an international scandal and is a little less than a na-tional disgrace and a blot against the mation's respect for the dead. During the progress of the evening's exercises and in the dying of the reveille, amid a deathly silence, two names were called of those who had crossed the great divide, Frederick Mann and John W. Collins, Softly the church choir chanted "The Vacant

The remainder of the services included, "Tenting Tonight," a solo by Mrs. Camp, and an instrumental selection by Mrs. Lampkin's violinists, besides the sermon delivered by Rev. Mr. Smith, which was closed by the sounding of "taps" by E. G. Piper.

AND CROWDED?

Is Heaven Peopled With a Scanty Few of the Elect Minister Asks.

Is hell populous and crowded? Is heaven peopled with a scanty few

Now Rev. Bryant C. Preston does not say exactly that but he does say this, just by way of advice: "Let me urge that you take a broad riew of life and of religion. Do you believe that the vast majority of the human race is doomed to everlasting fire? Do you think that only here and there one will escape the 'forever lost' class? Do you picture hell as populous and crowded, and heaven peopled with a scanty few of the elect?" And here are some of the other things ne said at a meeting of Congregationalists at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday:

"Any paltry way of looking at life, or religion is false, for religion is not omething written in a code, nor enshrined in a creed, nor housed in the seclusion of the church, but is a spirit which permeates thought and daily conduct, on the street, in the factory, the store or the bank. The only true hurch—the prophet practically asserts—has the dome of heaven for its roof, and the blue horizon for its walls. "The foot-rule religionist, however, has still something of a vogue in this 20th century, in spite of the warnings and admonitions of prophets, poets and seers. Do you believe in this or that doctrine? cries the uptodate theological inquisitor. Do you go to the true hurch? Are you tinctured with unitarianism? Is the poison of universalsm working in your thoughts?

"God's remonstrant angel of progress needs to again visit us and sweep these narrow men, with the foot-rules aside. How is it in other realms than that of religion. Take the world of music, for example. John Stuart Mill placed his foot-rule of logic alongside the realm of music. There are only seven notes, he declared, and soon the time will come when all of the possible combinations of these seven notes will be exhausted.

"How false an estimate. Music does not consist of seven notes, but is something beautiful, devinely delicate, like a perfume, so subtle as to be unmeasurable. No logical foot-rule can take the height and breadth of this wondrous art any more than religion can be compassed in a creed, or a mumbled set of ritualistic forms and ceremonies.

'Away with this foot-rule of intolerance. Be assured that not half as much is revealed in the scriptures as many imagine, except in one direction, and that is the direction of the Divine In that clear light will some of us gaze with wonder at our own feeble efforts to dam up the stream of God's majestic thought, and to measure with our little sectarian yard stick the scope Companionship of Disciples on Earth. "Christ longs and prays for the com-

His sermon was from John 17:24 Father, I will that they also whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me; for thou lovedst me before the foundation of the world." He said:

"In this intercessory prayer our Lord shows the deepest concern for His disciples in every relationship of life. This particular verse is usually inter-preted with reference to future fellowship and comradeship with the disciples. But this prayer of Christ is equally apto the present life. Christ longs and prays for the comradeship of his disciples here on earth in this FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH. life. His disciples are very dear to His The M. and B. Givision of the First heart. Dr. Smith devoted the larger part of the sermon to Christ's desire to have His disciples with him in the world's conquest. He gave special attention to the fact in calling the strong business nen from every walk of life into the great Laymen's Missionary movement. The text, he said, suggested a covenant between God the Father and God the Son for the world's redemption. He declared that men need the vision of Christ to see that this field is the world. WORLD READY TO RECEIVE GOSPEL

Rev. Mr. Rice Says Laymen's Movement Is Chance to Save the World.

In his sermon at the First Baptist church, Rev. Perry J. Rice said "The world was never so ready to receive the gospel as it is today.

"There is a peculiar combination of things lately in the orient and at home which makes the foreign missionary enterprise especially pressing and urgent. The success of the work during the first century of its history has made the present opportunity which amounts to a responsibility, and the church at home is better able to undertake the full discharge of this responsibility than ever before, "The laymen's missionary movement effort on the part of certain men of affairs to arouse the church at some to definitely undertake the task of evangelizing the world in this generation. Represented by his wife. "There is now a feeling that this ask, involving statesmanship of the highest order, demands the attention of men accustomed to handling large tasks in a large way. We must think in millions and plan to operate on a broad basis if we are really to do the thing that Jesus commissioned the church to do. "This effort is sure to have splendid reflex influences. It will save the church from littleness and from selfishness; it will emphasize the great verities of our holy faith and cause us to forget the petty little things that have divided us into rival if not hostile denominational camps. It will make us feel our kinship to each other and to Christ. Since the Christian religion arose in the east who knows but that the east, when once it has it, will be able to throw upon it a wealth of meaning which we of the west have never been able to see. The work of evangelizing the world therefore is the churches' present op-portunity to save herself and glorify her lord. Anything less as a program and an ideal would be too little, anything more, our Lord does not ask of us, but this he does ask and to fall to do it is to be disloyal to Him."

DYNAMITE HELPED PEARY TO THE

When Arctic Ice Became Too Thick the Explorer Blasted It.

New York, N. Y., Feb. 14 .- Any prosneed simply charter a ship and sail deasantly away to 90 degreees, north latitude should read Peary's orticle in the forthcoming March Hampton's "mgazine wherein for over a dozen pages he describes the terrific, nerve-straining, sleep-prohibiting fight of the stout little Roosevelt against a sea packed maverick bergs and ice floes run amuck, In one case it was even necessary to dynamite the ice, in order to save the ship from being crushed.

Nerve Racking Experience. "I think that none of the members of the expedition will ever forget the 20th of August," says Peary. "The Roosevelt was kicked about the floes as if she had been a football. The game began about 4 o'clock in the morning. I was in my cabin trying to get a little sleep with my clothes on-for I had not dared to remove them for week. My rest was cut short by a shock so violent that, before I realized that anything had happened. I found myself on deck-a deck that inclined to star-ooard some 12 or 15 degrees.

"I ran, or rather climbed the deck to the port side, and saw what had happened. A big floe rushing past with the current had picked up the grounded berg to which we were attached by the hawsers, and dashed it against the Roosevelt and clear along her port side, as if that 1000-ton berg had been a The berg brought up against another one just aft of us, and the Roose velt slipped from between the two like a greased pig.

"As soon as the pressure was relaxed and the ship regained an even keel, we discovered that the cable which had been attached to the floe berg at the stern had become entangled with the propeller It was a time for lightning thought and action; but by attaching a heavier cable to the parted one and taking a hitch round the steam capstan, we finally disentangled it. Surrounded By Bergs

"This excitement was no sooner over than a great berg that was passing near us split in two of its own accord, a cube of some 25 or 30 feet across dropplng toward the ship, and just missing our quarter by only a foot or two. Bergs to the right of them, bergs to the left of them, bergs on top of them. heard somebody say, as we caught our breaths at this miraculous escape
"The ship was now quite at the mercy of the drifting ice, and with the pres-sure from the outer pack the Roosevelt again careened to starboard. I knew that if she were driven any higher onto the shore, we would have to discharge a large part of the coal in order to lighten her sufficiently to get her off So I decided to dynamite the "I told Bartlett to get out his batteries and dynamite, and to smash the ice b tween the Roosevelt and the heavy floes outside, making a soft cushion for the ship to rest on. The batteries were brought up from the lazeret, one of the dynamite boxes red out with caution, and Bartlett and I looked for the best places in the ice for the charges.

"Several sticks of dynamite were wrapped in pieces of old bagging and fastened on the end of long spruce poles, which we had brought along especially for this purpose. A wire from the battery had, of course, been connected with mite. Pole, wire, and dynamite were thrust down through a crack in the connected with the battery, everyone go away to a respectful distance on the far side of the deck, and a quick, sharp push on the plunger of the battery sent the electric current along the wires.

"Rip! bang! boom! The ship shook like a dish of jelly, and a column of water and pieces of ice went flying a hundred feet into the air, geyser fash-The pressure of the ice against the ship being thus removed, she righted herself and lay quietly on her cushion of crushed ice-waiting for whatever n-ight happen next."
